

Weekly Blog Posts Grading Rubric

Student Name: _____

PSCI 110: Global Issues ▪ Summer 2014

Specific Requirements	Omitted	Needs Work	Good	% of Total Earned
Descriptive and unique title (10%): your title should capture the main idea of your argument—it should clarify your unique contribution to the class discussion. E.g., if arguing against military action in Syria: “Intervening against Assad still won’t stop the violence against civilians.” Or, e.g., if arguing that international climate change legislation can be achieved: “Climate change reform depends on the commitment of the world’s biggest polluters.”
Argument (30%): you must construct a convincing argument in support of your position—what is the substance of your claim; why is your perspective on the issue the correct one?
Evidence (30%): while you are encouraged to draw on assigned course readings to justify your argument, you must also cite at least two reputable external sources—news articles, academic journal articles, etcetera, which were not assigned to read for class. Your in-text citations must include the (1) author’s last name, (2) date of publication, and (3) specific page numbers you draw a quote or paraphrase from. E.g., (Brown 2013, 22-3) or (Murphy and Sullivan 2011, 36).
Counterargument (15%): you must discuss at least one objection to your thesis—that is, discuss one possible weakness or problem with your thesis; one reason why your argument might be wrong.
Proper length (10%): responses must be a minimum of 300 words and no more than 500 words. Put the total word count of your response in parentheses at the end of your blog post.
Works Cited (5%): at the end of your response, you must include the full citations of your external sources (MLA, APA, or Chicago style)—these do not count toward the required word limit. E.g., Luban, David. 2005. “Torture, American-Style” The Washington Post. 27 November.
Comments:				